SART 17.08 final project

- Medium: Adobe Fresco, Adobe Photoshop, Procreate (for animation)
- Concept: This series illustrates a poem of mine (shown on the next page), which explores being queer and the way it ties in with both marginalization and hope in resilience.

flowers (sinners creating god in their image)

lay me down upon a bed of hyacinths & leave no roses for me let earthworms gnaw me to pieces don't weep for me — wildflowers will paint over my name.

sing me a song about the halcyon days where we walk in the rose garden both untouched by thorns where your hands are whole and you kiss away the holes in mine and when your lips graze my fingers our gods do not call it a sin.

& weave my bones in into yours hand to mouth
rib to crumbling rib stitch us together like god's most hated siamese angel

roots knotted
in a desecration of eden & other hallowed gardens wildflowers snaking between too many nameless bones.

birds and insects can pick us bare but even they won't pick us apart our two skulls two pairs of splintered hands when they find us a thousand years later they'll call us god.
